
Forum for Tibet

Posted by Mynmyat - 2008/03/15 05:59

Wondering why there is not a forum for Tibet? Acknowledgement the annexation of Tibet by China is one thing, acknowledgement to respect the different cultures, race and entity of Tibetans and Tibet herself is another (thing). Why Tibet is submerge and disappear as a separate entity after all Tibet is big in size and part of Asia does she not?

Post edited by: Mynmyat, at: 2008/03/15 06:01

Re:Forum for Tibet

Posted by Jacques - 2008/03/15 09:40

Hi Mynmyat B)

Go to the forums "China, Hong Kong and Taiwan", you will find a forum called "The Tibet question", please contribute :P

Jacques

Re:Forum for Tibet

Posted by ZynnYaw - 2008/03/15 18:00

Hi Jacques,

Thanks for the kind advice. True, it is great for people who do not care whether Tibet is under China or not and also there are people who does care AND sensitive not to acknowledge the annexation of Tibet and Tibetans as part of China and Chinese. I am just contributing my "argument" on the issue of Independence of Tibet and Tibetans. Of course this will arouse many Chinese who like to annex land and people and create the "Great transparent 21st Century Wall" of Chinese empire that stretches or swallows the entire Asia including South East Asia one by one or even as a group simultaneously. Did you notice something in Burma forum? People who support SPDC writes only under the heading of the supporter of SPDC authors. I am Burmese and I know about Burmese very well. Long ago in OLD AO forum it was I who started this kind of behavior by writing under MY heading only. Many start to realize that and start doing themselves by refraining to write under the ones (authors) that they don't like. To be more clear or for clarification, Burma and Burmese are very superstitious country and people. Writing under an author's heading that they don't like, makes them inferior complex and thus they won't write under the heading of the author they dispised. This is Burmese nature. Even the top Generals who ruled Burma since 1962 to date still practice this psychotic practice and they are truly deeply superstitious. They rule the nation with favorite numbers, they make or print money that can be divided by a certain number. They even move the Capital City from Rangoon/Yangon to Naypyitaw. These are not fictitious fictions, these are true facts. So what I'm saying is or my point is, there are superstitious people and there are people who are not superstitious. Writing about Tibet UNDER or INCLUDED or PART of China forum is like succumb or acknowledging Tibet as "PART" of China. For semi superstitious people like me this won't happened. I see Tibet as Tibet and so is Burma as Burma. No matter how much China had accomplished in annexing Tibet or even tries to annex Burma, to me THE TRUTH REMAINS THE SAME. TRUTH can never be erased nor altered. I stand vigorously on the side of the TRUTH and not on the side of the REALITY for all things MUST past and nothing is permanent including "reality" that we see today will be an ancient history one day and can be changed. Many examples of ancient Empires of conquering colonial hegemonic annexers like China had shown they disappear one day. It may take a decade or centuries but the reality itself changes with time/era. Maybe many will hate me or dispise me but that's OK with me. I choose my ground and I will stand on my ground.

When the US reps met with SPDC officials they do not go to Burma but instead both SPDC reps and US reps met in China? Why? They choose the middle ground where no side acknowledges nothing. Sorry, I regard Tibet/Tibetans as a sovereign independent Nation.

Regards,

ZynnYaw (Knowledgeable Knight)

Re:Forum for Tibet

Posted by Jacques - 2008/03/15 18:41

Dear ZynnYaw,

I read you, Mynmyat, and others regularly.

Yes, when I opened the forum "The Tibet question " I put it in "China, Taiwan, Hongkong" because I din't find where to put it more geographically closed.

That don't means, that I think that Tibet is a part of China

If you look what I wrote in that forum and if you look the Political cartoon I post yerterday (14 March) What to you think where is my heart ?

Post edited by: Jacques, at: 2008/03/15 18:46

Re:Forum for Tibet

Posted by Mynmyat - 2008/03/15 22:27

Dear Jacques,

Thanks for reading my/our posts. It is a pleasure to contribute something to AO in every way that I/we can big or small, right or wrong, beautiful or ugly, common sense or nonsense. In fact I've been a member since the year 2001 to date.

regards,

Mynmyat.:lol:

Re:Forum for Tibet

Posted by ZynnYaw - 2008/03/15 22:55

Thank you for reading my posts dear Jacques,

You are a very kind, gentle (gentleman), well educated, understanding and good nature person. I notice that. John is lucky to have you as a friend.

Here is something to think about. Thought for the day I should say.

The difference between "Truth" and "Reality".

What is "real" for today will become a "memory" tomorrow. What is a dream of today can become a reality tomorrow so it means "reality" changes as time moves on. As for "truth", it never change. Truth is for eternity and that is why I don't pay much attention to reality but stand on truth.

regards,

ZynnYaw.

Re:Forum for Tibet

Posted by Jacques - 2008/03/15 23:07

My dear Mynmyat

Your are probabely an older A.O. member than me. I just joined in February last year as an ordinary member, and I have always this free status.

When John (Sandwan) suggested me to be active in the forums because he was attracted by my profile, I was not very interested, because I think, at this time, that I have other things to do than to be involved in this kind of things.

I just tried some times to please to him and I had fascinating exchanges with other members, mainly on Burma.

I am an Asia watcher, but mainly a China one. I have been several times to Tibet with a lot of Dalai Lama pictures to give to everybody, and as a French official, in the 1880's I plead for Beijing to have an agreement with the current Dalai Lama.

I was expecting what is now happening in Lhasa... but for next year

Don't hesitate to write to me, through a forum or a personal message, and using anyone of your names. If you want, I will give you my personal E-mail address

I am, as you, an ordinary member of A.O. but I want to help it because it is a wonderful place to fight for freedom in Asia : in Burma, in Tibet, in Malaysia, in the Philippines... but I do it by small touches by shared articles, political cartoons, by "Jacques eyes on Asia", Picture of the day.

Drop by drop we will win B)

Post edited by: Jacques, at: 2008/03/16 00:09

=====

Re:Forum for Tibet

Posted by Jacques - 2008/03/15 23:07

My dear Mynmyat

You are probably an older A.O. member than me. I just joined in February last year as an ordinary member, and I have always this free status.

When John (Sandwan) suggested me to be active in the forums because he was attracted by my profile, I was not very interested, because I think, at this time, that I have other things to do than to be involved in this kind of things.

I just tried some times to please to him and I had fascinating exchanges with other members, mainly on Burma.

I am an Asia watcher, but mainly a China one. I have been several times to Tibet with a lot of Dalai Lama pictures to give to everybody, and as a French official, in the 1880's I plead for Beijing to have an agreement with the current Dalai Lama.

I was expecting what is now happening in Lhasa... but for next year

Don't hesitate to write to me, through a forum or a personal message, and using anyone of your names. If you want, I will give you my personal E-mail address

I am, as you, an ordinary member of A.O. but I want to help it because it is a wonderful place to fight for freedom in Asia : in Burma, in Tibet, in Malaysia, in the Philippines... but I do it by small touches by shared articles, political cartoons, by "Jacques eyes on Asia", Picture of the day.

Drop by drop we will win B)

=====

Re:Forum for Tibet

Posted by Paradoxan - 2008/03/16 18:48

Impressive Jacques,

Ah huh! You do notice and accept the multiple usernames and identities of mine. See, when John (Founder) of AO run his website he had good and reliable friends namely you, Zia and Linsi helping him with helping hands as "Moderators". John is lucky you know. John is smart you know and intelligent too not to mention a professionally trained journalist. I read his article of encountering with spdc plain clothes agents while he visited Burma and that "shadows" makes him uncomfortable for John met with Aung San Suu Kyi herself in person. He is lucky to meet with Daw Suu for as a journalist it is very difficult even to get a visa to enter Burma for this ultra secretive isolated regime that has no mercy, compassion, dignity, integrity and honesty and they want to blind the world. Evil doers are never transparent anyway for they always have something to hide. Let's put aside of this sleazy spdc for a while and talk about AO and most important about the moderators and like.

First of all I would like to acknowledge the Founder, Admin and of course the Moderators who created and make this site one of the most attractive and interesting site for Asia. As an Asian American I do admire all you guys and gals excellent work to make this site a great site with wonderful features. All of you guys and gals efforts are seen and proven by looking at this site. No need for farther explanation. Although you may think you are ordinary like us (members) you are not and I will like to point out. You are like the right hand man for John. Your contribution is unimaginable for the expereees of your career, knowledge and experiences that you had gone through throughout your lifetime. A well life long experience person like you is a valuable asset for John. Don't you think so? At least that's what I think. One can plainly see the immense contribution you had done for AO. No doubt about it. It is not the style one writes or correct spellings or grammar or statement or high flown words.....it is the genuine, authentic, feelings, moods, expressions of a writer that comes from his/her heart and mind/brain sharing his/her thoughts in different diverse reactions good or bad, happy or sad, intelligent or arrogant and so on revealing the true human nature/expression makes this person or persons the essence of humanity, the liveliness and real emotions that makes this person a wonderful person writer indeed. Burma or Myanmar is not everything in this site, in fact Burma is only a part of Asia (the bigger picture) and some people tends to forget about that. In fact Burma is a problematic child of Asia. I had once read that AO was block by the junta regime of Burma. If that is the fact AO did something very extremely good for a bad regime to block! That is my understanding. You know and I know that bad or evil cannot stand good, goodwill and goodness. Yeah?

Best Regards to you with good health, wealth and happiness to you Sir Jacques,

Cheers to all.:cheer:

P.S. I think Mynmyat will appreciate my response. Don't you think so?:lol:

Post edited by: Paradoxan, at: 2008/03/16 18:56

Re:Forum for Tibet

Posted by Jacques - 2008/04/15 17:14

Hi Paradoxan,

How I could have missed your last message

Thanks for your good words.

Yes I try to help A.O. to be one of the most attractive website, because I like the concept. I never met John and you seams to known better on him than me.

For me, I just try to be a free man, trying to understand everyone even if I am opposed to what he is doing. I always put me on question : I am sure of what I think ?

Re:Forum for Tibet

Posted by Paradoxan - 2008/04/15 22:47

Hi Jacques,

You are very welcome. Finally you found me (my message). Mynmyat and me (living in same sin city/Las Vegas) are planning to move. We still don't know when but please do excuse us for the absent of "time out" on AO in case when the time comes for us to move. Sometimes we even "thinking" about moving to Australia, the island continent nation down under and check out what's life in Australia. I had visited Australia once before and found out Australia is a beautiful country and there are many interesting places to explore. Well, who knows? You might be getting response (from us) from another place when we move, even can be from Australia. I do have to extend my U.S. passport this year for it will be expiring this year.

As of my hectic times/days/era (nightmares) recedes and in my free space of time I will be posting messages in AO about interesting topics like Tibet. I had always recognized and respect the dignity of Tibet and Tibetans as an independent nation and people/race and it will stay like this as long as I live. I never pay attention nor will I acknowledge the occupation of China and Chinese no matter in any way shape or form they attempt to deceive or confused the world creating Tibet as their province. My will is even more stronger than Dalai Lama (their spiritual leader) for his perspective is "succumb" to Chinese occupation/annexation and he does not seek for total independence but I do. Although I am NOT a Tibetan nor Tibet belongs to me, I do seek and respect Tibet as different entity/nation TOTALLY independent, free and democratic as part of "Grand Globalization Gesture" (hope you get the code unlock). The new generations of Tibetans have every right to pursue their own destiny, prosperity and happiness free from all repressions and oppressions. Hope I had many free times to contribute my thoughts, beliefs and understanding on HUMANITARIAN issues like Tibet. Some call it "politics" but for me I call it HUMANS' issues for Tibetans are my distant brothers and sisters just like French and Brits and Indians and Americans for we all are living on this planet we called HOME. We are indeed "Earthlings" taking a place on this third planet of our Solar System, a tiny speck in the universe.

So long Pal,

Paradoxan.

=====

Re:Forum for Tibet

Posted by linsi - 2008/04/27 20:19

Mynmyat wrote:

Wondering why there is not a forum for Tibet? Acknowledgement the annexation of Tibet by China is one thing, acknowledgement to respect the different cultures, race and entity of Tibetans and Tibet herself is another (thing). Why Tibet is submerge and disappear as a seperate entity after all Tibet is big in size and part of Asia does she not?

Post edited by: Mynmyat, at: 2008/03/15 06:01

I wanted to share queries about this maybe we can ask the admin office to create a seperate board strictly for mongolia and tibet which is so timely-

so that it would not fall under Asia Observer but rather in Asia Country boards

B)

=====

Re:Forum for Tibet

Posted by Mynmyat - 2008/04/28 12:13

Agree! Yes, a separate board for 2 most prominent Asian BIG nations namely Mongolia and Tibet. I endorse and support this expanding idea of AO website. Thanks for the brilliant idea linsi.

regards,

MynMyat.

=====