Sri Lankan troops, on Thursday January 1, captured a key town from Tamil Tiger rebels in the island's north after intense clashes that left at least 50 guerrillas dead, the defence ministry said. The fall of Paranthan, near the Tigers' political capital Kilinochchi, has effectively cut off the rebels' main supply line to several other strongholds, the ministry said in a statement.

Afghan corruption: Everything for sale

When it comes to governing this violent, fractious land, everything, it seems, has its price. Want to be a provincial police chief? It will cost you $100,000. Want to drive a convoy of trucks loaded with fuel across the country? Be prepared to pay $6,000 per truck, so the police will not tip off the Taliban.
